

WAY Absolute Return Fund

March 2019

Investment Aims

The Fund aims to achieve capital appreciation in the form of a positive absolute return for investors in all market conditions on a 12-month basis. The Fund will focus on investment in a variety of alternative strategies with a low correlation to other asset classes. The fund will retain the flexibility to invest directly in warrants, bonds, government and public securities, money market instruments, cash and deposits that can best take advantage of economic opportunities worldwide. The fund has a flexible mandate allowing it to invest only in those assets it deems attractive at any particular time.

Fund Commentary

Despite indications of a slowdown in the global economy in terms of manufacturing and output, the US and UK stock markets rose in March with the US S&P500 up 2.89% and the FTSE100 posting a respectable rise of 1.78%. This was due in most part by the US Federal Reserve changing their outlook for future interest rate hikes. Indeed, not only have they abandoned the prospect of further hikes, but they have indicated a willingness for inflation to be allowed to run up above their stated 2% threshold. The Bank of England has followed suit but for different reasons. Firstly, the UK retail sector appears to be struggling with the shift to online shopping and, secondly, the political chaos surrounding the failure of the UK to leave the EU all but rules out any thought of interest rates rising anytime soon. It is an interesting balance given that both the US and UK economies are holding up rather well. February US unemployment fell to 3.8% and the UK January unemployment 3.9%. Furthermore, both are still seeing rising wages – up 3.4% annualised in the UK. The eurozone has problems of its own, both political and economic, and the European Central Bank has kicked the prospect of raising rates, previously summer, into 2020. The outlook for the economy, and central banks' reaction to it is finely balanced and, consequently, we will keep the fund well diversified.
