Portfolio Manager's Comments

Markets have been largely stagnant for June. The UK stock markets started the month pretty much where it ended at around 6180 and briefly closed at a high of 6484 on 5th June. Markets are now waiting to see what the next steps are regarding exiting lockdown, any 2nd spike concerns and ultimately, what the real impact on the economies have been.

The economy is the real key factor here and is still a very vague figure. We do not know what the true fallout will be, it changes daily depending on policy. An easy example here would be the travel and tourism industry. With the summer season here, currently, if you go on holiday you must self-quarantine on your return for 14 days, unless you visit one of the countries which have yet to be named as part of the air bridge scheme. Depending on the success of this scheme, this could make a significant difference for airlines and holiday companies such as TUI.

The Model Portfolios have performed well again this month, with all except Risk 2 beating their market comparisons over the last 3 months, and all except 2 and 3 beating their comparisons over 1 month.

We made one significant change this month which was the switch from Invesco Asian to Baillie Gifford Pacific B. As always, we will continue to review and make changes in line with the portfolio risk profiles.
